Short lives, brave deaths, and lo! Their souls were free to go Straight HOME from France.

Shoulder to shoulder they Marched on to clear the way Across fair France. Their young blood dyed the ground In "Fighting France."

To pay a splendid debt They gladly died-and yet They LIVE in France.

Live in a Nation's heart Of whom they are a part, The heart of France.

They live in memory,

Live close eternally, Yet lie in France. They're with you everywhere.
Only their bones are there
In far off France.

They lie where good men lie Beneath the tranquil sky Of sunny France.

They died for liberty
And lie where they would be
At rest in France. Above them poppies grow, And guarding, soft winds blow O'er fields of France.

Leave them at peace to rest, They gave their glorious best To help brave France.

Let them lie tranquilly.

Their bodies, dear, will be Safe there in France.

For it is hypocritically proposed to placate the "drys" in the matter of drastic enforcement and to likewise please upstate Republican leaders by retaining the State Excise Department, in which mighty host of their office holding leeches and sycophants held lucrative jobs. In other words, it is merely one more brazen other words, it is merely one more brazen attempt by the New York Republican managers to not only inflict a hateful, odious and objectionable law upon 10,000,000 inhabitants of the Empire State, but also to saddle upon them excessive and burdensome taxation to defray the mountainous cost of an army of spice species and ost of an army of spies, snoopers and
